

GARRETT'S GAME WITH THE KING.

Three Kings Beat Three Queens and Wins $200.

EASTERN IDEA OF THE LATE KING

Boat Race for $17,000—Wine Capacity of Kalakaua—Hawaiians Win Race But It
Is Given to Americans—Night at the Old
Palace After the Race—Prompt Payment.

The newspaper biographies of the late Robert Garrett contained no mention of the fact that he once enjoyed the distinction of playing the great American game—not baseball—but poker of course—with a real live King, says the Philadelphia "Times." Some time in the year 1888 he determined to journey to Mexico in search of the health which he had lost in vexatious financing. The original programme was altered after the trip had begun, and it was finally extended to the Sandwich Islands, and thence to China and Japan. He was accompanied by his wife and sister, and a number of other relatives to the Sandwich Islands that the incident referred to occurred. Kalakaua was then upon the throne—the same Kalakaua who once visited Philadelphia.

Mr. Garrett's party had scarcely been quartered in their hotel in Honolulu when the royal chamberlain of the Hawaiian monarch called upon them, and said that King Kalakaua would be pleased to have the gentlemen take dinner with him, but prior thereto begged them to witness a boat race that day between the Hawaiian crew and one from an American man-of-war lying in the harbor. The royal chamberlain escorted them to the King's sea palace, which was situated on a rock beyond the Pacific's angry breakers. Kalakaua greeted them most graciously. Mr. Garrett was surprised to find the black King a courteous gentleman, speaking English fluently, and reminding him much of Chester A. Arthur. His greeting was decidedly funny.

"Mr. Garrett," he said, "I am pleased to meet you. We have a bond of union. You have just tried to borrow $5,000,000 and I have just borrowed $2,000,000."

No one laughed at this salty more heartily than Mr. Garrett himself. At a signal from the chamberlain four fat negroes in royal livery approached, each bearing a solid silver saucer as big as the top of a writing desk—presents from Queen Isabella of Spain—and each loaded with twelve glasses of champagne. One servant approached the King, who was the first to take a glass from the tray. The other gentlemen followed the example, except Mr. Garrett, who during the trip abstained rigidly from all stimulants. The King nodded his head, threw it back, parted his lips, raised his glass and the sparkling beverage disappeared in a flash. The Americans eyes the royal gullet enviously. Without a moment's delay the first servant backed away, and a second approached with twelve more brimming glasses. Again the King nodded his head, and again wine was suddenly absorbed. And so with the third and fourth servants, until the forty-eight glasses of champagne had accomplished the purpose of their being. Then they were ready for the race.

It was actually for a purse of $17,000. The entire population of the town, 14,000 in number, turned out to witness the contest, a majority of them viewing it from the ocean on which they were disposed, particularly the girls, who seemed like demurens of the deep. Mr. Garrett, to ingratiate himself with the King bet $100 on the Hawaiian crew, and then told his majesty what he had done. Instead of receiving a royal smile he was astonished by Kalakaua saying quietly:

"Indeed, but I wish the Americans to win."

"Why, your majesty?" said Mr. Garrett in surprise.

"Well, I have bet $1,000 on them, that is why," was the frank response. The Hawaiians, in race of eight miles won by about ten feet, but in consequence of the royal wager it was announced that the Americans were the victors.

After dinner in the sea palace, the King said:

"Gentlemen, it is our custom after dinner to indulge in a game of poker, with a little limit of $5. Is that agreeable to you?"

Mr. Garrett and a few other members of the party determined to have a go at the Hawaiian Treasury. The company was seated in an immense hall, and when the cards had been shuffled there appeared at one end of the apartment eight natives with harps; in front of these eight mandolin players; a third row was made up of eight chorists. The melodies were American, and consisted largely of improvisations on the names of various members of the party. It certainly was rather alarming to hear one soloist in a parody on "The Colored Dude" gravely sing:

"Oh, there sits Robert Garrett, the Baltimore dude."

Yet that was what greeted the ears of the millionaire, and the reference was plainly for a compliment. But this diversion was almost too much for Mr. Garrett's calmness of mind, and as a result he soon found himself several hundred dollars poorer than when he entered the palace. The Hawaiian Treasury appeared very far away. But just then, during a large jackpot, he found three kings in his hand, and after considerable betting all the players except Kalakaua laid down their hands. He had three queens.

He dalled with Garrett until the pot was up to handsome proportions, and then called.

"Your majesty," said Mr. Garrett, smilingly, "if I had you in my hand I would, with what I have, be possessed of four very handsome kings."

His majesty was quick to see the point, and he promptly replied:

"That knocks the spots out of three of the royal concubines," and he at once wrote out a due bill for $200, beneath which he signed "Kalakaua, Rex."

Garrett looked dismayed, but said nothing. Early next morning, however, while he was at breakfast with the ladies of his party, the royal Chamberlain appeared before him, bowed, and presented the astonished American with $200. It required all his diplomacy to satisfy the ladies' curiosity as to why he had such early financial dealings with the Hawaiian Government.—Sacramento Record Union.

The Pope has issued a pronouncement confirming decrees, declaring all ordinations made under the Anglican rite invalid and entreating the Anglican clergy to return to the Catholic Church.
